A KIND HEART.

A TRUE FRENCH ROMANCE.

Knowing that the general class of readers are more interested in tales founded upon facts than fiction, we give the following sketch, which, although rivaling many of those romantic pictures drawn by fiction writers, is vouched for by an old English journal as being founded upon a real life occurrence, and merely polished by the pen of the writer. A newly married couple had just come from the altar, and were about starting on a bridal tour, as the following conversation took place:

The newly married husband took one of his bride's hands in his own. "Allow me," said he, "thus to hold your hand, for I dread lest you should quit me. I tremble lest this should be an illusion. It seems to me that I am the hero of one of those fairy tales which amused me in my boyhood, and which, in the hour of happiness, some malignant fairy steps ever in to throw the victim into grief and despair."

"Re-assure yourself, my dear Frederic," said the lady. "I was yesterday the widow of Sir James Melton, and to-day I am Madame de la Tour, your wife. Banish from your mind the idea of the fairy. This is not a fiction but a history."

Frederic de la Tour had, indeed, some reason to suppose that his fortunes were the work of a fairy's wand; for, in the course of one or two short months, by a seemingly inexplicable stroke of fortune, he had been raised to happiness and wealth beyond his desires. A friendless orphan, twenty-five years old, he had been the holder of a clerkship which brought him a scanty livelihood, when one day, as he passed along the Rue St. Honore, a rich equipage stopped suddenly before him, and a young and elegant woman called from it to him, "Monsieur, Monsieur," she said.

At the same time on a given signal, the footman leaped down, opened the carriage door, and invited Frederick to enter. He did so, though with some hesitation and surprise, and the carriage started off at full speed.

"I have received your note, sir," said the lady to M. de la Tour, in a very soft and sweet voice; "and, in spite of refusal, I hope yet to see you to-morrow evening at my party."

"To see me, Madame!" cried Frederic.

"Yes, sir, you—— Ah! a thousand pardons," continued she, with an air of confusion. "I see my mistake. Forgive me, sir! you are so like a particular friend! What can you think of me? yet the resemblance is so striking that it would have deceived any one."

Of course Frederic replied politely to the apologies.

Just as they were terminated the carriage stopped at the door of a splendid mansion, and the young man could do no more than offer his arm to Lady Melton, as the fair staanger announced herself to be. Though English in name, the fair lady, nevertheless, was evidently of French origin. Her extreme beauty charmed M. de la Tour, and he congratulated himself upon the happy accident which had gained him such an acquaintance. Lady Melton loaded him with civilities, and he was not ill-looking, certainly, but he had not the vanity to think his appearance was magnificent; and his plain and scanty wardrobe prevented him from doing credit to his tailor.

He accepted an invitation to the party spoken of. Invitations to other parties followed; and, to be brief, the young man soon found himself an established visitant at the house of Lady Melton. She, a rich and beautiful widow, was encircled by admirers. One by one they disappeared, giving way to the poor clerk, who seemed to engross the lady's whole thoughts. Finally, almost by her own asking, they were betrothed. Frederic used to look sometimes at the glass which hung in his humble lodging, and wonder to what circumstance he owed his happy fortune. He used to conclude his meditations by the reflection that assuredly the lovely widow was fulfilling some unavoidable award of destiny. As for his own feelings the lady was lovely, young, rich, accomplished, and noted for her sensibility and virtue—could he hesitate?

When the marriage contract was signed his astonishment was redoubled, for he found himself, through the lady's love the possessor of large property both in England and France. The presence of friends had certified and sanctioned the union, yet, as has been stated Frederic felt some strange fears, in spite of himself, lest all should prove an illusion, and he grasped his bride's hand as if to prevent her being spirited away from his view.

"My dear Frederic," said the lady, smilingly, "sit down beside me and let me say something to you."

The young husband obeyed, but did not quit her hand. She began, "Once on a time"—Frederic started, and half seriously exclaimed, "Heavens! it is a fairy tale!" "Listen to me foolish boy," resumed the lady, "There was once a young girl, the daughter of parents well-born, and at one time rich, but who had declined sadly in circumstances. Until her fifteenth year the family lived in Lyons, depending entirely for subsistence upon the labor of her father. Some better hopes sprung up and induced them to come to Paris; but it is difficult to stop in the descent down the path of misfortune. For three years the father struggled hard against poverty, and at last died in the hospital. The mother soon followed; and the young girl was left alone, the occupant of a garret of which the rent was not paid. If there were any fairy connected with the story this was the moment for her appearance; but none came. The young girl remained alone, without friends or protectors, harassed by debts which she could not pay, and seeking in vain for some species of employment. She found none; still it was necessary for her to have food. One day passed on which she tasted nothing. The night that followed was sleepless. Next day was again passed without food, and the poor girl was forced into the resolution of begging. She covered her head with her mother's veil, the only heritage she had received, and, stooping so to simulate age, she went out into the street. When there she held out her hand. Alas! the hand was white, and youthful, and delicate. She felt the necessity of covering it up in the folds of the veil, as if it had been leprosied. Thus concealed, the poor girl held out her hand to a young woman who passed—one more happy than herself—and asked, 'A sou—a single sou—to get bread!' The petition was unheeded. An old man passed. The mendicant thought that experience of the distresses of life might have softened one like him, but she was in error. Experience had only hardened, not softened his heart.

"The night was cold and rainy, and the hour had come when the night police appeared to keep the streets clear of all mendicants and suspicious characters. At this period the shrinking girl took courage once more to hold out her hand to a passer by. It was a young man. He stopped at the silent appeal, and diving into his pockets pulled out a piece of money, which he threw to her, being apparently afraid to touch a thing so miserable. Just as he did this, one of the police said to the girl:

"Ah! I have caught you, have I?—you are begging. To the office with you! come along!"

"The young man interposed. He took hold hastily of the mendicant, of her whom he had before seemed afraid to touch, and, addressing himself to the policeman, said reprovingly: 'This woman is not a beggar. No; she is—she is one whom I know.' But sir, said the officer ——. 'I tell you that she is an acquaintance of mine,' repeated the young stranger. Then turning to the girl, whom he took for an old and feeble woman, he continued:

"Come along, my good dame, and permit me to see you safely to the end of the street." Giving his arm to the unfortunate girl he then led her away, saying: "Here is a piece of a hundred sous. It is all I have—take it, poor woman."

"The crown of a hundred sous passed from your hand to mine," continued the lady. "and as you walked along, supporting my steps, I then, through my veil, saw your face and figure"—

"My figure!" said Frederic in amazement.

"Yes, my friend, your figure," returned his wife, "it was to me that you gave alms on that night. It was my life—my honor, perhaps—that you then saved!"

"You a mendicant—you, so young, so beautiful, and now so rich," cried Frederic.

"Yes, my dearest husband," replied the lady, "I have in my life received alms—once only—and from you; and those alms have decided my fate for life.

"On the day following that miserable night and old woman, in whom I had inspired some sentiments of pity, enabled to enter as seamstress in a respectable house. Cheerfulness returned to me with labor. I had the good fortune to become a favorite with the mistress whom I served, and, indeed, I did my best, by unwearied diligence and care, to merit her favor. She was often visited by people in high life. One day Sir James Melton, an Englishman of great property, came to the establishment along with a party of ladies. He returned again. He spoke with my mistress, and learned that I was of good family; in short learned my whole history. The result was, that he sat down by my side one day and asked me plainly if I would marry him.

"Marry you!" I cried in surprise.

"Sir James Melton was a man of sixty, tall, pale and feeble-looking. In answer to my exclamation of astonishment, he said: 'Yes, I ask if you will be my wife. I am rich, but have no comfort—no happiness. My relatives seem too yearn to see me in my grave. I have ailments which require a degree of kindly care that is not to be bought from servants. I have heard your story, and believe you to be one who will support prosperity as well as you have adversity. I make my proposal sincerely, and hope that you will agree to it.'"

"At that time, Frederic," continued the lady, "I loved you; I had seen you but once, but that once was too memorable for me ever to forget it, and something always insinuated to me that we were destined to pass through life together. At the bottom of my soul, I believed this. Yet every one around me pressed me to accept of the offer made me. and the thought struck me that I might one day make you wealthy. At length my main objection to Sir James Melton's proposal lay in a disinclination to make myself the instrument of vengeance in Sir James' hands against relatives whom he might dislike without good grounds. The objection, when stated, only increased his anxiety for my consent, and finally, under the impression that it would be, after all, carrying romance the length of folly to reject the advantageous settlement offered to me, I consented to Sir James' proposal.

"This part of the story, Frederic, is really like a fairy tale. I, a poor orphan, penniless, became the wife of one of the richest baronets of England. Dressed in silks, and sparkling with jewels, I could now pass in my carriage through the very streets where, a few months before, I had stood in the rain and darkness—a mendicant?"

"Happy Sir James!" cried M. de la Tour, at this part of the story; "he could prove his love by enriching you."

"He was happy," resumed the lady. "Our marriage, so strangely assorted, proved much more conducive, it is probable, to his own comfort than if he had wedded one with whom all the parade of settlements, of pin money, would have been necessary.

"Never, I believe, did he for an instant repent of our union. I, on my part, conceived myself bound to do my best for the solace of his declining years; and he, on his part, thought it incumbent on him to provide for my future welfare. He died, leaving me a large part of his substance—as much, indeed, as I could prevail upon myself to accept. I was now a widow, and from the hour to which I became so, I vowed never again to give my hand to man, excepting to him who had succored me in my hour of distress, and whose remembrance had ever been preserved in the recess of my heart. But how to discover that man? Ah, unconscious ingrate! to make no endeavor to come in the way of one who sought to love and enrich you! I knew not your name. In vain I looked for you at balls, assemblies, and theatres. You went not there. Ah, how I longed to meet you!"

As the lady spoke she took from her neck a ribond, to which was attached a piece of a hundred sous. "It is the same—the very same which you gave me," said she, presenting it to Frederic; "by pledging it I got a little bread from a neighbor, and I earned enough afterward in time to permit me to recover it, I vowed never to part from it.

"Ah, how happy I was, Frederic, when I saw you in the streets! The excuse which I made for stopping you was the first that rose to my mind. But what tremors I felt even afterward, lest you should have been already married! In that case you would never have heard aught of this fairy tale, though I would have taken some means to serve and enrich you. I would have gone to England, and there passed my days in regret, perhaps, but still in peace. But, happily, it was to be otherwise. You were single."

Frederic de la Tour was now awakened, as it were, to the full certainty of his happiness. What he could not but before look upon as a sort of freak of fancy in a young and wealthy woman, was now proved to be the result of deep and kindly feeling, most honorable to her who entertained it. The heart of the young husband overflowed with gratitude and affection to the lovely and noble-hearted being who had given herself to him. He was too happy for some time to speak. His wife first broke silence.

"So, Frederic," said she gayly, "you see that if I am a fairy it is you who has given me the wand—the talisman—that has effected all!"

GRANT'S BIOGRAPHY.

Biographies (it is said) lie like tombstones; and biographers do not try to elicit truth, but to make of their sometimes homely or positively frightful subjects presentable figures. Biographies used to be considered the staff of literary life, the mental pabulum for the nourishment of aspiring youths; now they are the cates of intellectuality, and therefore must be made as spicy as possible to tickle the callous palates of satiated readers. Against the biography appended there can be no positive objection, except that it is too near the truth to be regarded as a chief d'œuvre of high art:

EARLY LIFE OF GENERALLY USELESS GRANT.

This remarkable man was born at a very early age, of distinguished but pious parents, and it is said, on coming into the world, he went into the wailing business, thus clearly showing that he was created especially for fighting battles and wailing his enemies. Becoming tired of wailing, he took a great fancy to the milking business, but in the course of time he became wearied from this, and took to cradling for a living. When he was first born he had no idea of ever running for President, this remarkable fancy not taking possession of him till quite late in life—although too late, we fear, to do humans good. It is not positively known whether he is the real original little boy:

"With corks crew-curls and strong Red Eye,
Who never, never, never told a lie."

or not; but in the absence of any other little boy claiming to be the original Jacob, we think we may safely say he was. It was a sad piece of neglect of his stern parent that he never planted a cherry-tree and left a hatchet lying around promiscuously. If he had, how easy might his son have become a second Father of his Country. At an early period of his life he cut his teeth on a copy of the Constitution of the United States, and a little later on studied strategy from a cheap edition of the American "Hoyle." From this latter book he learned to cut and shuffle in a remarkable manner, and could make his partner believe he was playing for himself. It is a remarkable fact that for the first two years of his life he never spoke a word, and he hasn't spoken many since. The first word he did say was "pap." Whether this referred to his paternal guardian, or to the pap known as official, cannot of course be told. There seems to be considerable doubt existing as to what his initials (U. S.) stand for—seme contending for the United States and others for Unsophisticated Sardine. Neither of these, however, are correct. They simply stand for Useless Simpson. Useless, after a celebrated Feman Emperor, was given him by his grandfather, who was a learned historian—and Simpson is after an uncle who still carries on business in the Bowery.

Useless' principal amusement in youth was breaking horses and breaking wood; and when he was only ten years old he could tell a horse from a mule in about ten minutes, and could break the smallest quantity of wood of any boy of his age. One day, when his father had gone away from home, this obedient boy went to the barn, and putting a bridle on the fine three-year-old colt, took him out in the field for the purpose of breaking him. He broke him in just three minutes—he broke his neck. For this little joke his father flanked him severely.

He was always very fond of driving and taking care of spirited oxen, and would do any kind of work with them.—He took a team one day unbeknown to any one, and going out in the forest, actually hauled in enough wood to make a respectable fire with. With the aid of half a dozen of men he could easily load the biggest log in the forest; and furthermore he could stand by all day and look at a man chop it up. Quite early in life he had his counterfeit presentment taken and his head examined by a celebrated artist and learned phrenologist, who told him he would undoubtedly one day become president—of a debating society. From the fact of his telling so long beforehand that Useless would one day become distinguished, this learned phrenologist could not possibly have been a pupil of Fowler & Wells. In the company of other boys Useless was very quiet and reserved, tho' on all desperate occasions he was always selected as the leader. But to tell the truth, he cared very little for the society of boys, greatly preferring to associate with horses and mules.

There is no truth in the report that he was ever a tanbark student, though he always had a great taste for grand and lofty tumbling (a taste, by the way, which he shortly expects to indulge,) and at one time devoted all his spare moments to carrying water on both shoulders at once, without spilling a drop. Perhaps the report originated from the following little incident: A circus coming to the place where he lived, he borrowed a quarter from a fellow horse tamer, and went down to see the show. The ring-master, some time during the intellectual and moral exhibition, offered a counterfeit $5 bill to any boy who could ride the mule around the ring a certain number of times. Young Useless immediately accepted the bill, and jumping into the ring said "he'd ride that mule around if it took all summer."—Springing on his back, he busted him over the ear and shouted for him to go on.—The mule immediately bolted forward, then suddenly stopped and kicked up behind and before, and reared up and tumbled over. But all to no purpose. Like the celebrated Roman warrior, Egregiously Mistaken Stanton, Useless refused to be shook. The ringmaster, seeing his bill was in a fair way of changing hands, became considerably riled, and at once left a living cynocephalus loose in the ring. The strange creature immediately jumped up behind young Useless, and got on his head and in his pockets, and in front of him, and in fact got himself so mixed up with him that it was impossible to tell which was the monkey and which was the future great strategist. However, he won the money; and it is said that even to this day the man owes it to him.

Having no taste for the tanning business, as carried on toward him by his father, he applied for and obtained admission to West Point. Here he was principally remarkable as a good eater and sleeper, and by applying himself to his studies, soon distanced all competitors, and, on graduating stood number thirty in a class of thirty-one. It is not positively known whether the thirty-first boy was General Sickles or General Schenck.—Lieutenant Useless, as he was now called, fought and distinguished himself in all the battles of the Mexican War; and had brigadiers been as plentiful then as now, he would in all probability have been reduced to that rank in society. What he did in the late rebellion everybody knows; and if they don't we advise them to ask any grave-digger in Virginia. He is at present residing at a small city called Washington, under the immediate care of Mr. Washburne (who talks in Congress and knows all about him and more, too,) and a celebrated canalist whom Grant once had a difficulty with about a bottle, and who succeeded in making a beast of himself during the war. These two moralists, it is said, are going to do something with him, or for him, or for themselves, shortly; but what it is no one knows.

The beginning of the little unpleasantness which has culminated in impeachment found Useless sitting on the fence, with one leg on either side, indulging in the luxury of a cheap Rapahannock, and deeply engaged in thought, perhaps thinking of the (very) Low-ell statesman and his bottle. But soon becoming hard pushed, he lost his balance and tumbled over into the mire of Radicalism. where he will, in all probability, to use the elegant word of a learned African resurrectionist, "stick." Useless is said to be a man of great (p)luck; and from the manner in which he has put up with certain parties at that small city of Washington, we should also say of great endurance. But his ideas of the situation are Radically wrong; and, altogether, we think, he would make a one-horse President.

TOM. WONDER.

A Yankee School Marm Down South

LOVE LETTERS TO HER NEGRO SWEETHEART.

The Macon (Georgia) Journal and Messenger, gives the following account of a very rich case on trial in the Court at that place:

The grand jury of Bibb county were yesterday called upon to investigate a rich case, the facts of which we propose to give in detail.

Several months ago a white woman by the name of Amanda Fawler, thoroughly imbued with love for "the poor downtrodden African," came here from the North, and entered upon duty as a teacher of colored children. She had no connection with the Lewis High School, but was running upon an independent scale.

In the course of time she met Arthur Edmonds, a black negro fellow, who acts in the capacity of porter at the family grocery store of Grier, & Lake, and fell violently in love with him. They carried on a correspondence of the most affectionate, loving and endearing kind, as will be seen by the specimen letters published below, and often met and billed and cooed together.

Things might have thus gone on indefinitely, and resulted in a permanent union between Miss Amanda Fawler and her dear Arthur Edmonds, if the aforesaid Amanda had not been guilty of a little piece of moral insanity. On Wednesday last Messrs. Frier & Lake received an order purporting to have been signed by the lady of a prominent minister. The order was sent by a servant who had been in her employment, and requested the sending of a ham, a jar of brandy peaches, some coffee and sugar, and several other articles, amounting to eight or ten dollars' worth. The clerk gave the note a cursory glance, and, not suspicioning anything, sent the goods as requested.

But when he came to copy the order into his blotter, it occurred to him that something was not right about it, and that it was in the same hand-writing of Arthur's love letters which he had been in the habit of reading for that gay Lothario. Calling upon Arthur for a specimen letter (of which he had a pocket full) and comparing the writing with the order, his suspicions were more fully confirmed. It only took a few moments to confirm them by a conference with the lady from whom it purported to have come, and finally, when Miss Amanda was called upon for an explanation, she acknowledged having written it, but claimed to have some sort of authority for doing so. This was all stuff.

She was at once arrested and sent to jail and at the hour of writing, the Grand Jury is considering a true bill against her which will be returned and the case tried before Judge Cole at the present term of the Superior Court.

Miss Amanda Fawler is about twenty-six years of age, is not killed with good looks, but appears to be a woman of some intelligence. She had been teaching a colored school near the Vineville branch, and says she had eighteen day scholars, and more than that number of night scholars.

Arthur has a wife and seven children, who will no doubt read Miss Amanda's loving letters to him with no small interest.

We copy two letters to "Dear Arthur," as follows:

"MACON, GA., March 26, 1868.

"DEAR ARTHUR.—As a ray of sunshine across the frozen earth, came your most welcome missive to my poor heart. It was opened and read, and its contents gave me much pleasure to think you had not forgotten me. I hope you never will, for I never will forget you while I live. How can I forget any one that I love so dearly as I do you? I had written to you, and when I sent it to the office I received yours, and I hasten to respond to it. The one I sent you last was not directed in care of any one. It was directed only to you. So I think you had best write in your own name. The sentiments of my heart are in it and I want you to get it. I hope you will answer this soon, for I shall look for an answer every day until I get one. I want to see you very much. I looked for you at the time you promised to come, but in vain, for I have not seen my dear Arthur. Oh! do come soon. I wish to see you, to talk with you. Write to me, and give the sentiments of your dear heart. If I had the chance I would tell you more than I expect you to wish or hear. Go to the office soon, and get that letter, for I do not want my letters to stay long enough there to be advertised. So do attend the office very punctual, and I will do the same. Do come soon, if you please. My dear, don't fail to write to me and often. As I am in a hurry, I will have to close for this time. I will do better next time.

"I am, as ever, yours, most devotedly.

"AMANDA FAWLER.

"P. S.—Write soon. Let me hear from you to-morrow sure, if you please."

"MR. EDMUNDS—Dear Sir: I promised you to let you know when I succeeded in obtaining a room, where it was. It is in the building belonging to Mr. Hollingsworth, the lower room on the street toward the magazine. I do sincerely hope you will come to me soon, for I wish to see you on some very important business. Please come up here Saturday night, if not before, for I shall look for you until I see you. I am staying by myself. So you must come, for I have a heap to tell you. You must take care of yourself for me, and don't let any girl steal you, for I want you myself. I think you might give me that much, for you know I love you too good for to let any one steal you from me, so you must let me see you soon, if you please. I shant sign no name to this, for you know who you saw on last Saturday evening, and was talking with concerning a room. I close for this time.

"I am yours till death." (No signature.)

There were three or four more of these "Dear Arthur" letters, but the grand jury called for them before we could get them copied. We will try to get the balance in due time, and give them in this column.

Sturdy Old Ben Solliquizeth.---A Rhyming Editorial.

Ben Wade sat in his easy chair on the night of the 16th of May, and his eyes were bright with a restless glare, and he swore in his usual way; damned Fessenden, Fowler, Ross and Grimes, damned the President, damned the times. Van Winkle he cursed without book or bell, and Trumbull and Henderson sent to hell.

As he thought of the hopes that lured him on, when as yet impeachment was in its dawn; of all the wonders he meant to do, his feet kept up the devil's tatoo, and, like Scott's elfin page, his arms he tossed and wildly muttered, "Lost! lost! lost!" for his hopes of conviction were melting away, and in far perspective the White House lay, and with hopes and purposes foiled and crost, what marvel Old Ben should cry, "Lost! lost! lost!"

"They must vote," said Ben to himself, "I hear, in accordance with their convictions. Their convictions, forsooth!" and he laughed and poured forth a torrent of maledictions—"convictions, indeed from such men of phlegm, why conviction is all we expect from them. Let them perjure themselves for the party's good, it is only proper and just that they should, for I think with Thady, although I don't blurt it out like him, that it wouldn't hurt. If he's a patriot who yields up his life in his country's cause on the field of strife, what's he who gives up not life but soul, not the present but future, not part but whole.

"To the infernal gods men better than Grimes devoted themselves in the olden tims, but he and his fellows, I feared, wouldn't make such a sacrifice, even for country's sake, and so it turned out when it came to the vote, for turned was each traitorous miscreant's coat. They have killed the party, they have wrought its fall with their squeamish consciences, d—n them all! To desert us just in the nick of time for paltry scruples, without reason or rhyme. Never before was there treason so fell! But they've done their worst, let them go to h—l, the Republican party is dead and damned"—and starting up, for a door was slammed beside him, old Ben smoothed his wrinkled front, and with something between a sigh and a grunt, strode up and down like a wild beast caged, the storm that within his bosom raged, breaking forth at times with his tempest-tost spirit in cries of "Lost! lost! lost!"

Aye, lost! who'll sum up the grand amount you have lost, far more than you'll ever count. You have lost the chance to retrieve your fame, you have lost the chance of an honest name, the applause of the good, the esteem of the wise, the chance to show to the world you could rise above selfish interest and party spite, still holding policy second to right, loving your country above yourself, ranking principal higher than pelf, private ambition and personal ends, the abasement of foes, elevation of friends, counting as nothing at all in the scale against justice and truth, which should ever prevail. When you count what you've gained and then sum up the cost, no wonder you shudderingly moan "Lost! lost! lost!"

HON. CHARLES E. BOYLE,
Of Fayette County.

FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL:
GEN. WELLINGTON H. ENT,
Of Columbia County.

Democratic County Convention.

The Democratic electors, and all others opposed to Radical misrule, will meet at their respective election precincts, on SATURDAY, THE 27TH DAY OF JUNE, instant, between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing two delegates from each district to attend a County Convention, to be holden at the Court House, in Ebensburg, on MONDAY, THE 29TH DAY OF JUNE, instant, to place in nomination a County Ticket to be supported by the Democrats and Conservatives at the coming election, and to transact such other business as the interests of the country and the party may demand.

By order of the Committee
R. L. JOHNSTON, Chairman.
Ebensburg, June 1, 1868.

RECONSTRUCTION.—The bill to admit into "the Union" the States of Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, North and South Carolina and Florida, has passed both houses of Congress, and is in the hands of the President, who will, without doubt, veto this outrageous bill, and present his reasons therefor to the country. Alabama is admitted, says the Harrisburg Patriot, notwithstanding the fact that the carpet-baggers' constitution was rejected by the people; a minority only of the registered voters of the State having gone to the polls, the act of Congress requiring a majority. But the reconstruction committee took ex parte testimony, to the effect that many negroes were deterred from going to the polls by threats, and that on account of a very heavy rain storm, "the river was so high that Sambo couldn't get across" to vote; and so admitted Alabama. The Legislatures of these States, and of Arkansas, already admitted, will now assemble and send twelve "mean whites" to the United States Senate. Virginia, Mississippi and Texas still remain in a territorial condition. There are screws loose in these parts of the dominion of Gen. Grant. There is great danger that they will relapse into the hands of the white man, and hence the Radicals are in no hurry to "reconstruct" them. Unless more troops and Freedmen's Bureau agents are sent among them, the Radicals might lose them in November. For this reason it is thought better to keep them out of the "Union" altogether.

Now, that these seven Radical States are admitted, the question comes up, are the troops to be withdrawn? Do the Radicals intend to keep these States of their own making, beneath the heel of the military, until after the November election? Cannot the negro sovereigns and the "loyal whites" run the machine, without the aid of the bayonet? We will now see what confidence the Radical have in the virtue of their own political nostrums.

ON THIS LINE, ALL SUMMER.—Just fo the truth of history, and so as not to muddle the weak brains of future Bancrofts, we beg our Republican friends not to quote in this canvass Grant's statement "I shall fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

How otherwise will the possible Bancroft save his wits from dazing when he discovers that Grant abandoned "this line" after losing more than one and a half times as many men as Lee had, and more than six times as many men as Lee lost? And what will save the poor fellow from lunacy when in the midst of all this hullabaloo he discovers that Grant having abandoned "this line" found himself at the base of another line which could have been reached without the loss of a man—the line from which the Army of the Potomac was once recalled?

And nothing but suicide, surely, can console him for the discovery, which our Republican friends must preceive that he will make, that Grant not only took all that summer, but the next fall, and the winter following and the spring too, before his swopping off of six Northern soldiers for every Southern soldier had been "fought out."—N. Y. World.

MR. WOOLLEY.—Mr. Woolley has been released from the Radical bastile. He refused to answer questions, because they related to the business of his client, and a client has a right to the secrecy of his attorney. Butler then summoned the client, who testified that his business had nothing to do with the impeachment. Mr. Woolley then had no objection to answer, and did so, and has been discharged. Butler, to keep himself before the public, continues to enact the comedy of "Much Ado About Nothing." He also makes the whole proceeding a farce by avoiding any investigation of the corruption and intimidation used by the Radicals in their vain efforts to secure an unjust conviction. Butler professes to be only anxious to discover what could have induced Fessenden, Grimes, and the rest, to vote honestly. A regard for justice and their oaths is a motive too incomprehensible to Butler for him to accept it. Men, he thinks, always act from a desire to get greenbacks, gold coin, spoons, or other valuables. There are, however, other motives for human action, though Butler does not know it.—Phila. Age.

—The Buffalo Express—Radical—asserts that there are so many children in Indiana named after Schuyler Colfax, that all the stonecutters in the State keep grave stones on hand carved, "Sacred to the memory of Schuyler Colfax ——," ready to insert the patronymic in the blank space when the order is given after the funeral. There will be no necessity for the blank space after next November, for even Colfax himself will be politically defunct.

BUTLER GETS SNUBBED.—It is said that during the examination of Mr. Ransom Van Valkenburg, before Butler's inquisition, that Butler asked the witness what he had been doing in Washington so long? To which the latter replied, "None of your business, sir." The examination of this witness was further continued, and the Express publishes the following report thereof:

Mr. Butler asked: What became of the money that Mr. Woolley left in his room on the centre table?

Answer: I have it in my pocket.

Butler: Will you produce it and the envelope containing the other papers?

Answer: I will produce the money, but the papers you shall not have.

The money was then laid on the table, amounting to $17,100, in seventeen one thousand dollar notes, and small bills making the one hundred dollars.

Immediately after Butler received the money he ordered the witness out of the room, but he declined to leave, giving as a reason that he (witness) was responsible for the money, and he could not leave it in his (Butler's) hands. Butler insisted on the witness leaving the room, but the gentleman refused, without he could take the money with him. At last B. was forced to succumb, and the money was counted in the custodian's presence.

Butler counted the money, the clerk of the committee taking the numbers of the notes.

After the counting Butler looking sideways, said to the witness: I find, sir, here sixteen thousand one hundred dollars.

Witness. Mr. Butler, if you will take the trouble to look under that piece of paper near you, I think you will find a one thousand dollar note, which I have no doubt was placed there through mistake.

General Logan rising from the sofa, said: Yes, Butler, I see one corner of it sticking out.

Butler: Oh, yes; I did not notice it before.

DISINTEGRATION OF RADICALISM.—The corruptions and excesses of the Radical politicians of Philadelphia have, at last, cloven their party in twain in that city. Discord reigns supreme in club-house and bar-room, and like the fighting felines of Kilkenny, the Radical factions are scarcely leaving as much as their caudal extremities to tell the tale of their former existence. The "Ring" have nominated W. B. Mann for District Attorney, whilst the "Brown-stoners" have selected Isaac Hazlehurst as their candidate for that office. A mournful strain comes up from Forney's Press—"a wail of the damned" over the prospective loss of the sop of office to the Cerberus of the Radical Inferno. Hear the piteous moan. It almost brings the brine to one's eyes to listen to the querulous quacking of this dying duckling:

"In all fairness this should have ended the contest so far as internal organization is concerned, but the action of the bolters from the convention yesterday, before even a ballot had been cast or ordered, presents an evidence of discord which strikes a severe blow at our great party, and which, unless soon repaired, may wreck our whole local and State ticket, and even affect the election of General Grant."

Eheu! alas and alack and a-well-a day! Bill Mann will be beaten, the whole local "Ring" ticket will be beaten, the Radical State ticket will be beaten, Grant will be beaten, and—there will be no pap for John W. Forney! Oh, woeful day, dies irae, oh, fateful time, that sees power and plunder depart from the grasp of Forney! Let Mann and Hazelhurst reconcile their differences; "let us have peace," as Grant would say. For goodness' sake, don't do anything that will stop Forney's bread and butter. "Occasional's" bowels yearn continually as it is.

Cease, mad Radicals, cease your strife,
Let the "Dead Duck" languish into life!
—Harrisburg Patriot.

DEATH BY THE ASSASSIN.—The foreign dispatches of yesterday brought the news of the assassination in a far-off country, of Michael, the reigning Prince of Servia, who was shot in one of the public parks of the capital,—the City of Belgrave.

Servia of which he was Hospodar or Governor, is a territory of about the size of Pennsylvania with a population of over a million of inhabitants. It is considered the most beautiful country of all the Danubian principalities, and the gem in the midst of the warlike races of the Carpathian and Balkan mountains.

The father (Milosh Obrenovitch) of the late Prince was compelled in 1839 to resign his office of Governor in favor of his son Milan,—who soon after died, and was succeeded by this assassinated Prince Michael, who in turn was deposed by insurrection in 1842 and succeeded by an adventurer, Alex. Stefanovitch. Strangely enough however a revolution in 1858 restored the father Milosh to power, and on his death in 1860, this son, the Prince Michael, succeeded his father, and was, as noted above, Governor at the time of his death.

The Prince was born in 1825, and for one, not yet so very old, has indeed been fated to a chequered life and melancholy end at last.—Pittsburgh Post, 13th.

THE New York Courier makes some strange inquiries in regard to the hanging of Mumford by Butler. That paper asks: "Where was Mumford born—the Mumford whom Benjamin F. Butler hanged at New Orleans ostensibly for insulting the American flag—that particular flag which floated over Butler's cotton custom house? Where was Mumford born? In what year did he and Col. Butler jointly run a faro bank in San Francisco? How much did Col. Butler owe Mumford when he was hung? And was he hung for the flag or the money? Who knows? Who knows his birth, history, etc.? It is getting to be nearly time to ventilate all the pleasing incidents of the twin brethren Butler in New Orleans."

—One of the cleverest political caricatures of the season is that of the Beast in the character of an old Arab sitting on a stool and holding a baby marked "impeachment" on her lap. —One of the sharpest political caricatures is the "dying impeachment gladiator." Ben. —The action of the Republican conventions of Fayette and Indiana counties in expressing their unanimous preference for Hon. —The Roanoke Times says a white female of that county gave birth to a child as black as the ace of spades, one day last week. It also speaks of another case in which the wife of a white man was driven off with her black paramour, and thinks there is a Radical defect somewhere.

A SCHOOL HOUSE FULL OF SCHOLARS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—While the storm was at its height the Methodist church at Savanna, Illinois, used as a school house, was struck by lightning. The school had been dismissed and the scholars were standing about the doorway waiting for the storm to subside, when a bolt of fire struck the gable end of the church, tearing off the siding about ten feet in width, reaching the lower sill and removing a large quantity of plastering on the inside, while the door-casing was shivered into fragments and the floor covered with ruins. At the time of the accident, as we have before stated, the scholars, about sixty in number, were huddled together in the doorway, and every one was more or less injured. One small boy had his boot taken off, and was thrown down by the shock, but soon recovered, picked up his boot and started for home. Miss Emily Sinclair had both shoes torn from her feet, the lightning in its course going near the instep down to the sole, leaving a zigzag tare around to the heel. The eyelets in the shoes were melted, while the feet of the girl were badly blistered, but, strange to say, the shock made her insensible but for a few moments. A. Saxton was seriously hurt, his body being badly blistered, but hopes are entertained of his recovery. One of the citizens, sitting in a doorway fifty feet from the church, was knocked down for a moment, but as soon as he could recover himself he rushed over and found four children apparently lifeless. They were carried home, and remained in that state for hours, but were finally resuscitated. The affair, as may be imagined, caused great excitement, and fathers and mothers, whose little ones chanced to be in the church, were almost bereft of reason.—Dubuque Times, 7th inst,

GEN. BUTLER'S INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

WASHINGTON, June 5th.—It will be perceived from the following report of the proceedings of the investigating committee today, that General Butler is pushing his inquiry vigorously, and with a prospect of success. It is evident from the following examination, that some startling disclosures will be made concerning the means used to secure the votes of the renegade Senators for the President's acquittal.

Mr. Joseph Pidgeon was placed upon the stand to-day and examined by Mr. Butler.

Mr. Pidgeon having been sworn, Mr. Butler produced a telegraphic dispatch, and said:

"Joseph do you recognize that?"

"Yes sir."

"It is in your handwriting, is it not?"

"It is."

"Oblige me by reading it to the committee."

"I'd rather not," said Joseph blushing.

"Sirrah! you must. You admit of having sent it?"

"Yes sir; but I don't like to read it. It don't concern anybody."

"We'll see about that. Are you going to read it or ain't you?"

"Pshaw! that's got nothing to do with impeachment, I tell you."

"Catiff! remember where you are. Don't answer back. I will read it to the Committee and expose your villainy."

"Oh look here now, don't go to reading that thing out loud here, you know I——"

"Silence ser-vee! Gentlemen this dispatch reads as follows: 'Be Wary Smith—Pres't Johnson's all right.' "

"O Pshaw!" said Mr. Pidgeon, "that ain't there. You don't know how to read writing. You ought to spell all the hard words. That says: 'Miss Mary Smith—Staid at Johnson's all night.' Johnson keeps a grocery and lives on C street. He's a friend of mine."

"S'death! Pidgeon, remember you're on oath. If you don't tell the truth I'll have you manacled and placed in the dungeon beneath the capitol mont!"

"But I tell you, you don't read it right. 'Be Wary Smith!' Ha, ha! Why that's ridiculous; yes it is."

"Young man. I am not to be trifled with. On your oath now, who is Smith?"

"Never you mind now who Smith is."

"See here, Pidgeon, I'm dangerous when I get mad. If you don't answer my questions, I'll confine you in Vinnie Ream's room, and get her to make a statue of you; I will, upon my sacred word of honor," said Butler with a fiendish scowl.

Joe Pidgeon shuddered, and the cold sweat flood upon his brow at the thought of the srightful humiliation and suffering of this punishment.

"But I tell you, said he, "that you don't know how to read. That's addressed to Miss Mary Smith."

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Butler, rising, "we will trifle with this perjured traitor no longer. In this letter is contained the evidence of the infamy of three Senators. I have at last unravelled this vile plot. I will read you the whole of the despatch.

Be Wary Smith—President Johnson's all right. Senator Fowler's consented. Check for ten thousand Hartford Bank. Sure now of Grimes; endeavor to get Trumbull over. Apply to Th. Weed." J. PIDGEON.

"What do you think of that?" asked Mr. Butler.

"Unanswerable," said the committee.

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed Mr. Pidgeon.

"Now who did you send that to? Who is Smith?" inquired Mr. Butler.

"Ha! ha! ha! ha!" laughed Pidgeon. Mr. Pidgeon was becoming hysterical.

"Young man, this levity is untimely; answer my question?"

"Ha! ha! ha! Oh thunder-r-r-r," said Mr. Pidgeon.

"Sergeant-at-arms, remove this knave! Chain him to the hair mattress in the committee room with the tapestry carpet; allow no one to see him but his friends, and give him nothing to eat but the delicacies of the season. We'll see what severity will do," said the malignant Butler.

Mr. Pidgeon was completely unmanned. He got on his knees and prayed to be allowed to testify.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I will read that document. Mr. Butler made an absurd mistake. Well, this is ridiculous. Ha! ha! ha!"

"Stop!" said Mr. Butler, cutting his laugh short, "no more ill-timed mirth, young man."

"Well," said Joe, "you know I'm courting a girl named Smith, and I came on to get the old man's consent. He's here, you know, and she said she was agreeable if he was. And so I asked him, and he said he didn't care a cent, and I telegraphed to her. Oblige me," said Mr. Pidgeon, taking the despatch from Mr. Butler. "This is what I wrote. I admit the penmanship's a little rough."

"Miss Mary Smith.—Staid at Johnson's all night. Your Father's consented. I gave him ten thousand Hearty thanks. You are now mine forever. Trouble's all over. Appoint a day for The Wedding.

"J. PIDGEON."

"That's all, gentlemen. A man in my situation don't care a particle for impeachment. No, he don't. 'Be Wary Mr. Smith!' Well that is rich, anyhow;" and Mr. Pidgeon laughed immoderately.

Mr. Butler looked somewhat chagrined, but in a few moments he said:

"Well, sir, your statement appears to be true, I am sorry to say. But let this be a warning to you not to come fooling around here with your small affairs while such a terrible man as I am is about. It ain't safe. Discharge the prisoner." And Pidgeon walked out.

But you can easily see that Butler is in deadly earnest, and that if he could only get a sure thing on some fellow like Pidgeon the people would have to read all those furlongs of speeches in the trial over again. In my opinion the sanity of the country is not safe if this man is allowed to go at large and bring about this frightful result.—Correspondent Philadelphia Evening Herald.

—We submit the following question to proficient scholars in arithmetic. If in less time than a month the nomination of Grant and Colfax transformed such a reliable Radical State as Oregon into a Democratic State, how long will it take to convert all the Republican States to the true faith of Democracy? Can it be done before next November, including Massachusetts and Vermont?

YATES REPUDIATES.—Senator Yates, of Illinois, made a speech in the United States Senate, on Wednesday last, in which he took square issue with the Chicago platform in regard to the suffrage question. We quote from the proceedings of the Senate, as reported by the Associated Press:

"Mr. Chandler then withdrew his motion, and Mr. Yates, taking the floor, proceeded to argue on the right of Congress to impose conditions of admission upon States, and of the perfect control of that body over the question of suffrage in all the States. He contended that the Senators who voted for this bill, and who voted for the Colorado bill, had committed themselves to this principle. If they had the right to control the suffrage in the States of the South, they had the right to control it in the States of the North, and there was no possible evasion of this point."

What will the Radical party do with Yates for thus contemptuously expectorating upon their platform? Will they read him out, a la Trumbull, Grimes, Fowler, et al? His speech, certainly, is as heretical as Trumbull's vote, and quite as damaging to Radicalism.—Harrisburg Patriot.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

THE LATE FAIR AND WHO WON THE PRIZES.—The Ladies' Fair in aid of the building fund of the new Catholic Church in this place, is now numbered among the things that were, and nothing is left but the handsome sum realized, and the pleasing recollection that it was a well conducted and most enjoyable season of recreation and amusement throughout. The ladies having the matter in charge vied with each other in a most handsome and commendable spirit in making the Fair a complete success, and that they succeeded was fully attested by the way in which all participants enjoyed themselves nightly, as well as by the more substantial results in the shape of several hundred dollars in greenbacks—how much we shall be better prepared next week to state definitely. Of the gentlemen managers modesty forbids us to say anything commendatory, for fear we might be suspected of "blowing our own horn" while sounding the praises of others more deserving. But of the "rank and file" who nightly crowded the Hall and the building attached we can truly say that their liberality has never been surpassed on any occasion of the kind we ever witnessed, and they certainly deserve the highest encomiums for the unexceptionable decorum and liberal spirit manifested by each and all of them during the continuance of the Fair, and as this was true of strangers as well as citizens, it might appear invidious to give the names of any who particularly interested themselves; still we cannot refrain from mentioning as among the former Mr Wm. Dysart and John Cox, Esq., of Johnstown, John Porter, Esq., of Hemlock, Peter McGough, Esq., Sonman, and several others whose acts we remember but whose names we forget. To the young ladies who furnished the delightful vocal music, and to the gentlemen who contributed sweet harmony by aid of their violins, and especially to that enchanting musician, Mr. A. J. Maguire, is due great praise for the charming manner in which they entertained and delighted all listeners.

Nothing occurred to mar the good feeling or dampen the generous impulses which prevailed so uninterruptedly and satisfactorily during the entire time the Fair continued, and although many were no doubt disappointed in not drawing the lucky numbers, or any of them, no one received the result in other than a spirit of resignation and good will.

The following named persons were the lucky recipients of the prizes mentioned: Amelia Convery, the bride; Maud Kittell, a handsome comb; H. A. Shoemaker, a diminutive doll, (lucky for the baby); Mrs. Crouse, larger doll; Eddie Murray, old man and woman; Annie E. Murray, calico dress; Frances M'Donald, lawn dress; Philomena Rhey, Sinking Valley, silk dress; Wm. Kaylor, Loretto, child's dress; Bernard M'Colgan, Wilmore, album; Thos. Hare, Jackson township, "Sherman and his Campaign;" Eddie Murray, circus horses; M. J. O'Neill, gold ring; Jennie Weakland, money purse; Bridget Dugan, Wilmore, toy tub and washstand; Mrs John A. Blair, basket; Frank Lytle, fan; Mrs. E. Gibson, silver butter cooler; Mrs. Philip Collins, embroidered night wrapper; John Biter, Munster township, cow; Mrs. Todd, footstool; Miss O'Harro, set of jewelry; Mrs. Samuel Henry, silver molasses cruet; Jane Parrish, statue of Blessed Virgin; Mrs. Thomas Hoover, set of dishes; John Wesley Lewis, Cherry Tree, set chairs; Joseph Elig, plough and barrel of flour; Rev. R. C. Christy, picture of crucifixion; Mrs. T. B. Moore, basket of fruit; Mrs Jos. M'Donald, bible; Mrs F. P. Tierney, pair of blankets; Gen. Williams, Harrisburg, gold watch, once the property of the lamented Maj J. C. Noon; Hon D. J. Morrell, Johnstown, bridle; Mrs. John Fenlon, silver pitcher; William D. Jones saddle and dark delaine dress, Agnes Parrish, silver castor; Mathew Cohen, Johnstown, card case; Ann M Dougherty, bogwood jewelry; Rose M'Donald, blue delaine dress; Mrs. Samuel Henry, fan; Mrs John Roberts, grey delaine dress; Col B M'Dermitt, $5 gold piece; John Sharbaugh, Esq., Summit, cigar case; Mrs. Frank Stupp, Loretto, set of coral jewelry; Ignatius Flohner, Summerhill, rocking chair; Richard Martin, fine shirt; Bertie Scanlan, silver napkin ring; Mrs. Drew, pincushion; Joseph M'Donald, basket; Frank M'Pike, silver quarter; MacShane and the other Mac— N O T H I N G.

In addition to the above prizes and several other valuable articles held over for further chances a lawyer's-study gown and a lady's dress pattern were up for votes, F. A. Shoemaker, Esq., came out best on the gown, and Miss Annie E. Murray on the lawn dress.

And now it occurs to us to remark that while those persons who contributed the many handsome and valuable articles, and they were all contributed, deserve to be commended for the generous and noble liberality displayed on this occasion, one lady among the number, and she a stranger, is entitled to the grateful remembrance and prayerful well wishes of every member of the congregation which she so handsomely, so generously and so unselfishly aided by the contribution of two of the finest and most costly articles contributed, and which commanded the admiration of every person who saw them. That lady is Mrs. Henry Stockerhoof, of Bellefonte, and so long as the building stands which she thus generously aided in bringing to completion, so long should her name be revered and her kindness remembered by all who worship beneath its roof.

THE DIGNITY OF THE LAW MUST BE MAINTAINED.—During the first week of Court several difficulties occurred prejudicial to police regulations, but our star city police acted in a manner worthy of the dignity of great officers of a great city.

One of these difficulties came under our own observation. A worthy Radical from the country had mixed too much lager with PORTER, and the city fathers had fined him. The same evening, while the policeman was taking his lager, OWEN to some words, the countryman threw a few crackers, (not fire crackers, kind reader, but water crackers,) at his sacred person. The Commonwealth immediately felt insulted in the person of her Charley, who imposed violent hands upon the offender. Some resistance being offered an extra policeman was hailed from his beat, and pouncing upon their prey each took an arm, and the unfortunate man found it was all DAY with him. The Mayor, MOORE in sorrow than in anger, reproved the offender for his rudeness and proceeded to REFINE him in the sum of five dollars, he protesting lustily against this REFINING process.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.—In addition to the case on trial when we closed our last report, there were but two causes disposed of up to the adjournment of Court on Saturday afternoon. We give the result of these as follows:

John Brotherline vs. John K. Smith. Anthony Swires and Michael Cassiday—Ejectment. June 9th, jury called and sworn; 11th, jury find for plaintiff, all the lands lying in Cambria county down to line established by Messrs. Owinn and Vickroy in 1843, with six cents damages.

John Fenlon vs. Thomas Duncan—Appeal. June 11th, jury called and sworn; jury withdrawn and case continued.

Valentine Krise vs. John Noel, Washington Neason and James Neason. June 11th, cause backed, jury called and sworn; jury find for defendants.

DEMOREST'S MONTHLY for July prompt as usual, and with an additional quantity of Summer Literature, is the most useful and interesting of all the parlor periodicals, readable from beginning to end, and, better than that, its tone is elevated and earnest, very unlike the frivolous artificiality that disgraces so many fashion journals. The fashions are a feature, as ever. Ladies in the country think they can not make a garment without Demorests Magazine, and there is, in addition to the treasured patterns, always a fund of useful and valuable information upon all household and domestic subjects. W. Jennings Demorest, 473 Broadway, New York. $3.00, yearly.

EDITORIALITIES, LOCAL AND GENERAL.—James Fowler, the young man arrested for stoning a passenger train, has been released on bail.

The house of Abraham Shaffer, in West Providence township, Bedford county, was totally destroyed by fire on the 3d inst.

An infant child of Mr. Peter Reddinger, residing near Chaneysville, Blair county, died from the effects of eating a piece of paper.

A portion of Mifflin county was visited by a heavy storm on the afternoon of the 6th inst., which done damage to the amount of $2 0,000.

A brakeman on the Penn. R. R., named Rickabaugh, was seriously hurt by being struck on the head by a signal post, on Thursday week.

Wm. J. Ryan, Esq., recently of this county, has been appointed Mail Agent on the Pa. R. R., in place of Thos. Morrow, removed. Bully for Bill!

Col. William A. M'Dermitt, the Republican candidate for County Treasurer last fall, has removed to Johnstown, with the intention of making that his future home.

A lad named Fetter, while attempting to climb on a passing coal train at Saxton, Huntingdon county, a few days ago, fell under the wheels and was instantly killed.

An unknown man was killed on the Penna. railroad, near McVeytown. He had gone from one track to avoid an approaching train, to be killed by another on the other track.

The Hollidaysburg STANDARD dubs Easly of the VINDICATOR "Captain;" but fails to tell us how he acquired the title. Can "the light of his general phiz" cast any light on this important subject?

Messrs. Thos. McEnroe and Henry McHugh, whose homes are in Washington township, this county, were ordained priests of the Catholic Church, at St. Michael's Seminary, near Pittsburgh, on Saturday week.

Thomas Stanley, a miner residing at Tunnel Hill, near Gallitzin, was seriously injured, on the 4th inst, by a portion of a coal mine falling in upon him. His leg was broken, and he was otherwise severely bruised.

Andrew Baker, employed in a foundry in Trough Creek Valley, Huntingdon county, accidentally came in contact with a saw operated by steam, not long since, and had his head severed from ear to ear. He lived but five minutes.

A good cup of coffee is appreciated by all who drink it, and no better cup of coffee was ever prepared than can be made from the roasted coffee put up in packages at the Iron City Spice Mills, and kept for sale by Geo. Huntley, in this place.

We are personally acquainted with Dr. H. B. Miller, of Altoona, whose card appears in our paper this week, and we can recommend him as a skillful Dentist and deservedly man. All who need dental work of any kind will find him fully competent to do it.

O. W. Easly, of the Altoona VINDICATOR and E. B. McCrum, of the TRIBUNE, have both been caned within the last few days. Ex-Burgess Fechinger did it, and did it handsomely, and the two "ink slingers" are as proud of their respective "sticks" as a young mother "imbrace"-ing her first born, could well afford to be.

A young man named E. J. R. Fortune, a freight brakeman on the Pa. R. R., was killed near George's station, Westmoreland county, on Wednesday of last week, by being run over by a portion of the train upon which he was employed. He is supposed to have fell between the cars while attempting to step from one car to the other while in motion.

Mr. Patrick F. Carney, of Allegheny township, while engaged in chopping wood on Saturday afternoon last, accidentally struck his foot with the axe, inflicting a most terrible gash and almost severing the foot in twain. It was with great difficulty the flow of blood was stopped, and for a time it was feared that Mr. Carney would bleed to death. He is now doing well.

Thomas Sirr, a young man who disappeared from Johnstown more than a year ago, on account of a "little unpleasantness," was arrested in Pittsburg, a few days since and sent back to Johnstown to answer the charges of affiliation, fornication and bastardy, and other kindred misdemeanors. As he has not reported at headquarters here we presume he has entered bail or arranged his difficulties in some other way ere this.

SUMMER RESORTS.—The middle of June brings sweltering weather, and the denizens of the cities are already seeking an asylum from the heat of summer and the drudgery of business. As usual, large numbers are turning their steps to the mountain, where they are sure of finding a cool, invigorating breeze and comfortable quarters. The present season promises an unusually large number of visitors, and our landlords are making active preparations for adapting their accommodations to the increased influx of pleasure seekers.

The Cresson Springs was opened for the season yesterday. This first class summer resort has been in successful operation for a number of years, and is the result of the genius and enterprise of the late lamented Dr. R. M. S. Jackson, M. D. It is delightfully situated on the western slope of the highest hight of the Alleghenies, where the Penna. Central Rail Road crosses the Northern Turnpike. All the trains stop at Cresson Station, and excursion tickets during the season are granted to visitors. The buildings have capacity for 500 guests, and have been crowded to overflowing every season under the proficient management of the gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. George W. Mullin, whose superior as a caterer is nowhere to be found. Bath houses, billiard saloons and bowling alleys supply health, pastime and exercise.

The Callan House, Mr. Wm. Callan proprietor, stands a furlong further East, and is the choice resort of those who prefer comfort without fashionable ostentation. It is remarkable for the neatness of its arrangements and the scrupulous care which the energetic landlady exercises over the sleeping and eating departments. A sulphur water fountain at the door and a beautiful JET D' EAU lend their attractions to this favorite resort.

Near Loretto, three miles from Cresson, is the famous Loretto Springs House. It has been leased to Mr. John McIntosh, of Baltimore, who has been employed for some time past in having it fitted up in the finest style his customers could desire. The location of this resort is delightful—its arrangements perfect. The water is excellent and slightly medicinal—the bathing rooms ample and perfect, while billiards, bowling, etc., afford agreeable pastime. Visitors can take the Ebensburg Branch train at Cresson and alight at Kaylor's Station.

Mrs. O'Hara, one mile from Cresson on the turnpike, and Mr. Henry O'Hara, one mile further west, have their spacious houses opened as private boarding houses, and we have no doubt they will be filled to their utmost capacity, as they have been heretofore; while Mrs. Susan Gallagher, near Loretto, has amply provided for the accommodation of a considerable number of guests.

Add to this that fine hotels in Ebensburg, Carrolltown, Loretto, Summit and elsewhere have all "put their houses in order" for the accommodation of the largest possible number of visitors, and those who seek health and recreation on the mountain need have no fears about finding a hospitable welcome.

"SPOONS."—Don't be always talking about New Orleans, Butler, Spoons, &c., but go to Cham. Roberts' and buy a good set of tea or table spoons, of which he has just received a full supply. But if you don't need spoons, go for a castor, butter dish, butter knife, sewing machine, fish hooks, and in fact, anything you cannot procure elsewhere, and you may be almost certain to get it.

CORRECTION.—In our notice last week of the fire at Wilmore we inconsiderately stated, on information given us, that the lady telegraph operators "were awakened," etc. As it is the duty of one of them, at least, to be awake all night, our notice unintentionally did them injustice, and hence this correction. They were not awakened, but were awake at the time the fire brok out.

PARADISE LOST.—The beautiful Panoramic representation of Milton's wonderful poem, "Paradise Lost," was exhibited at the Court House on Tuesday evening, and will be again exhibited this (Wednesday) afternoon and evening. It is a magnificent and awe-inspiring Panorama, and no one should fail to see it.

ALTOONA CITY, June 13, 1868.

EDITOR CAMBRIA FREEMAN—Your Altoona correspondent, "T. I. M.," in his last labored epistle delivers himself of the following choice tit-bit: "Miss St. Clair lectured here the other evening to a few crazy men and silly boys. I did not hear the subject," etc. Now, as I happened to be one of the "silly boys" referred to by "T. I. M." I propose to propound a few simple questions to his majesty which he will oblige me and the other "crazy men and silly boys" by answering. How do you know the audience consisted of "a few crazy men and silly boys"? Did you judge so from the fact that the lecture was delivered in the Democratic Club Room, and conclude therefrom that it was similarly farcical to the scenes usually enacted therein by yourself and other knowing ones to the exclusion of the honest and confiding rank and file, at whom you laugh derisively for what you conceive to be their stupidity? If this be your reason for asserting that Miss St. Clair's audience was 'crazy and silly," then I must endeavor to disabuse you of your error by giving my testimony, as I saw the audience and HEARD the lecture. The lady in question, in the judgment of one of the "silly boys," is of rather prepossessing appearance, very graceful and dignified in her manners, and exceedingly eloquent. She is not of the Anna Dickenson stripe, it is very evident, or she could not have obtained the Democratic Club Room in which to deliver her lecture. Oh no, the high minded "T. I. M.," who runs that "masheen," could not have permitted such a desecration of "principal." The subject chosen for the occasion was "Newfoundland," which I considered very ably handled. The lecturess pointed out the advantages of education, not only to the individual but to society at large, and especially commended the influence of Catholic education. As evidence, she cited the visible improvement it has effected in the moral condition and social standing of the poor and heretofore illiterate classes in Newfoundland. She farther remarked that from personal observation she thought the City of Altoona presented a fine field for the exercise of the same influences, as the tone of society in our midst was not generally of an elevating character. Pity "T. I. M." did not make her acquaintance. She would have left our town with a more exalted (?) opinion of our citizens, and I am sure he would not have perpetrated his last infliction on the readers of the FREEMAN. In reply to his strictures on the persons composing the audience, it is sufficient to say that "crazy men and silly boys" do not generally attend lectures of this kind. There is no rule without an exception, however, and in this case there may have been a few exceptions, but there was one less than there would have been had "T. I. M." saw fit to attend the lecture.

Now, with all due respect for your correspondent, I cannot take leave of him without giving him a "bit of my mind," which I hope he will accept as coming from one who has been pained at his late epistles—pained on account of the Democracy, on account of society, and on account of "T. I. M." himself.

First, then, on account of the Democracy.—You only injure the party by such wholesale abuse of such men as control the ALTOONA TRIBUNE. They are too well known in this community to need any defence from me, nor do I wish to be their champion, but I cannot let the occasion pass without asserting that they are both high toned gentlemen, and that their paper is an excellent family journal. Their selections are certainly very good, and of an elevating character, as an examination of their paper will abundantly prove.

Secondly, on account of society. You say: "If my (your) religious training permitted I (you) would say 'damn it!'" This is the unkindest cut of all. Religion, if I understand it, requires of us to 'do unto others as we would have others do unto_us," and the meek and humble Nazarene says: "Take my yoke and learn of me"—not to create the world nor in the world to raise the dead, but—"that I am meek and humble in heart." Therefore I feel that from the way the tree, or "T. I. M.," is in l ned, the religious as well as the literary twig has been perversely bent.

Thirdly, on account of "T. I. M." himself We are all well aware that it it were not for "T. I. M." the Democracy would have no existence here. He has all the brains of the party, and does all the thinking for it, besides being its scape-goat on all needed occasions.—Then why rage and fret

"Like one who tragically struts up and down,
And rolls the words as Sisyphus his stone;
His lab'ring arms, unequal to the weight,
"Heave like a porter's at Billingsgate."

Poor "T. I. M."! you are really writing yourself down an ass, and I would suggest that henceforth, instead of the initials "T. I M.," you sign your true name, Thomas, or more properly Tom ass, to your communications to the press.

Trusting that "T. I M.," or Tom ass, will keep cool, now that the dog days are approaching, I subscribe myself

ONE OF THE "SILLY BOYS."

CARROLLTOWN, June 15, 1868.

DEAR FREEMAN—I am this week pained to chronicle a sad and almost fatal accident which occurred to the son of one of our most worthy citizens, Mr. Benj. Wertner, on Friday last. It appears that Pius Wertner, a lad of some thirteen years, had mounted a horse for the purpose of conveying their dinners to several laborers who were at work on a farm a short distance from town, and not long after starting the horse became frightened, it is supposed, at the rattling of the dishes, and ran furiously up the main street of the town, throwing the young man off in the neighborhood of Mr. Sier's saddler shop. The workmen employed in the shop ran to his assistance without delay, and found him senseless and apparently lifeless. He was carried home and Dr. Oatman summoned but notwithstanding all that medical skill could do the unfortunate lad remained in a torpid condition for several hours—not being able to utter a word until the following day It is thought that the horse struck him on the head with his hoof, injuring the skull considerably. I am glad to say that at present good grounds for the hope that he is out of danger are afforded by his improved condition.

Ex-Sheriff Buck was engaged on Friday and Saturday last in selling at auction the remaining stock of goods of the late firm of Buck & Co., recently dissolved by the retirement of Mr. Sharbaugh, who has turned his attention to the tilling of his fine farm near town. It is but a simple act of justice to remark, in connection with the name of Mr. Buck, that there is no truth in the generally accepted opinion that it was the new oil, of the same character which he manufactures that caused the appalling death of the young lady in your place a few weeks ago. You, Mr. FREEMAN, are well aware, and all your readers should be, that it was carbon oil which exploded and caused that unfortunate catastrophe.

Dr. T. F. McClure, our popular dentist friend, is again among us on a professional visit of at least a couple of weeks duration. During his stay he may be found at his old office, and as his proficiency as a dentist is well known, persons needing his services would do well to call as soon as convenient. May his "shadder" never diminish. More anon.

U. NITED.

ST. AUGUSTINE, June 13, 1868.

EDITOR FREEMAN—It may be interesting to some of the readers of your invaluable journal to learn that St. Augustine is still ahead in the way of amusements. On last Thursday we had a large pic nic in the grove of Dr. Krise—one which was the cap sheaf of all the pic nics ever held in this place. It was gotten up for the benefit of the new Catholic church in this place, now almost completed. The attendance was very large, and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the full extent, some by dancing and others by looking on, and all by partaking of the good things, of which there was no scarcity. There was a beautiful gold pencil, a large and luscious cake and a handsome doll baby put up at lottery. Mr. S. A. McGough drew the pencil, Rev. E. Burns the cake and Mr. Wm. Little the doll baby—a very appropriate prize for the latter, considering that he has no more real one in his household. Yet he has proved recreant to the trust, for he has cast it out on the world's wide stage to seek a more congenial resting place. He has presented it to the church, and now it is up again for chances. Who will be the next lucky person I cannot guess, but I hope it may be your friend SHELLBARK.

A NEW VOLUME.—The Pictorial Phrenological Journal for July contains portraits of many distinguished Men, and Beautiful Women. European and Asiatic Beauties—English, French, German, Russian, Grecian, Swedish, Austrian, Polish, Swiss, Dutch, Turkish, and Japanese; also, Lord Brougham, Abbott Lawrence, Zadok Pratt; Peter Von Cornelius; Verdi, Miss Pittsinger; and twelve Roman Catholic Prelates and Priests; Mahomet, and his Religion. "The development Theory," by Prof. Gill; Lady Dafferty, or the Woman Question; Thirteen National Types of Female Beauty; Professional instruction in Practical Phrenology; Indians and Mountains of Oregon; a French Educator on American Schools, and much other interesting matter. A new volume begins with this number, only $3 a year, or $1 50 for six months. Address S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway, New York.

"EXCESSIVELY warm," the mild man says,
"Has been the weather of the past few days,"
"Yes, devilish hot," is the prompt reply
Of the irreverent cuss who stands near by.
But, as if these words lacked the force to tell
Of the warmth in the air as the sun's rays fell,
Another one adds, with a sweltering face
"'Tis hot as—well, an exceedingly sultry place."
And thus they talked and thus they swore,
Forgetting for a time that at Cohen's store
The coolest of garments for summer wear
Can be bought at prices that'll make you stare.
Yes, stare and buy all will and may
Who visit this store without any delay.
For in Parke's Hall, Johnstown, Main street,
Cohen & Brother will every one kindly greet,
And give them bargains in clothing we ween,
Such as never before in this region was seen.

HOW IS IT?—There was considerable talk some two months ago about our borough dads intending to have several filled up public wells opened out, but the talk has ceased and the wells are still in STATU QUO—if you know where is. We don't say that these wells should or should not be opened out, but we do say that if they are opened out, or if any other wells are opened out anywhere by anybody, or new pumps inserted in wells already opened out, the persons so opening wells or inserting pumps, or those having the work done, should by all means visit the mammoth establishment of Geo. Huntley, where a large lot of the best, simplest, cheapest and most satisfactory pumps manufactured are all the time kept for sale, together with numberless other articles to suit all classes.

OH FATHER, dear father, do please hurry home,
My wishes no longer oppose;
You know you have promised so oft, when you'd come,
You'd bring me a new suit of clothes.
My elbows stick out, like the head of a clam;
My pants the bare knees do expose,
Then father, dear father, do please hurry home
And bring that suit of new clothes.

At last accounts the aforesaid father was wending his way homeward with a summer suit for his boy under one arm and a handsome dress for his daughter under the other. He had, very sensibly, bought them at the cheap store of H. A. Shoemaker & Co., where everybody should go who seeks the worth of his money.

M is for Many who seek Mayer's store;
A is for All who have been there before;
Y is for You, who should go right away;
E is for Everybody, who'll find it will pay;
R is for Ribbons which on bonnets display
So many bright colors in tempting array.

Don't forget, ladies, to visit M. Mayer's fancy dry goods and millinery emporium, Parke's Hall, Main street, Johnstown—the leading ladies' furnishing store in Cambria county.

IF you should be walking down the street
And a well dressed comely lass you meet,
Your mind make up, as well you mark her,
She bought her dress from V. S. Barker, who has a splendid assortment of the finest kind of summer dress goods for ladies' wear, as well as an endless variety of other goods of all kinds and at all prices—everything very cheap, however, and very excellent in quality and fashionable in style.

LOCUSTS.—The seventeen year locusts have made their appearance in several parts of this State, but have thus far failed to climb the mountain. We shall not regret if they should keep failing. We don't want locusts, or low cusses, or any other low things except the low prices which always abound at the extensive store of R R. Davis, on High street. High and low can buy there all the time cheap for cash.

ALL THE GO.—The fine stock of summer hats introduced by Joe Thompson are all the rage among our gentlemen friends hereabouts. Like Hobensack's pills, 'everybody takes them,' but don't put them through the same process. Joe is always at headquarters in the city, buying the best, neatest and most fashionable goods of all kinds, and those who buy at his store here have always the choice of a full stock at the lowest prices.

MORE FRIGHTENED THAN HURT.—Living near Warrensburg, Mo., is a farmer, not long from the "Sucker State," who has a beautiful daughter, just on the shady side of sweet sixteen. The daughter, Miss ——, is domestic in her turn, and a few mornings ago was engaged in milking. She was seated on a stool, and near by sat a half-bushel measure, in the bottom of which was a handful of salt. In sitting down, it so happened that the hoops of Miss —— extended over the top of the half-bushel measure; the calf of the cow she was milking, a strong, fat yearling, with horns an inch or more long, discovered the salt in the measure and commenced licking it, in which operation his horns became entangled in the hoops of Miss ——, and the first thing she knew she was jerked from her seat, at which the calf became alarmed, and with a bawl dashed off, dragging the young lady. Blinded and frightened out of his wits at the strange sight, he ran over a straw rick some ten feet in height, which by chance stood in his way. Fortunately just as he reached the top of the straw pile, the fastening gave way around the young lady's waist, and she suddenly found herself sitting uninjured upon the elevation, while the gentleman calf was fast disappearing in the distance with the hoops over his head. He has not been seen since, and it is a matter of surmise to the neighborhood as to whether he has gone to attend a masquerade ball or the sale of the Iron Mountain Railroad.

HAVE you paid for the FREEMAN?

THE FIRST GOLD MINE.—The first piece of gold found in the United States is said to have been found in Cabaras County, North Carolina, in 1799. It seems from the account furnished Mr. Wheeler by Colonel Burnbandt, that a boy named Conrad Reed went with his sister and younger brother, to a small stream called Meadow Creek, on Sunday, and while engaged along the bank shooting fish he saw a yellow substance shining in the water, which he picked up, and found to be metal. His father carried it to Concord, and showed it to William Atkinson, the silversmith of the town, who was unable to tell what it was. It was taken home by Mr. Reed, and being about the size of a small shooting-iron, it was used as a weight against the door to keep it from shutting. In 1802 he carried it to market at Fayetteville, where the jeweller pronounced it gold, and melted it, producing a bar six or eight inches long. It was sold to the jeweller for three hundred and fifty dollars, a "big price," as Mr. Reed thought. Upon subsequent examination, gold was found along the surface on Meadow Creek, and in 1803 a piece of gold was found in the stream that weighed twenty-eight pounds. Several other pieces were found, varying from sixteen pounds to the smallest particles. The vein of this mine was discovered in 1831.

Given to AMERICAN SEWING MACHINES, per Imperial Decree, published in the "Moniteur Universel" (Official Journal of the French Empire), 2d July, 1867, in these words:
ELIAS HOWE, JR. { Fabricate de Machines coudre exposant. / Manufacturer of Sewing Machines, Exhibitor.
The Howe Sewing Machines are celebrated for doing the best work, using a much smaller needle for the same thread than any other machine.
They are adapted to all kinds of Family sewing, and Manufacturing of every description, making a beautiful and perfect Stitch, alike on both sides of the article sewed, and will neither rip nor ravel.
Every Machine is as near perfection as the best machinery in the world can make it.
The parts being exactly alike, if any part needs to be replaced, the operator can replace it.

G. & H. BARMORE,
PIANO FORTE
MANUFACTURERS,
Ware-rooms, 348 Bleecker Street, New York City.
32 Years Established, and 27 Prize Medals Awarded.
Our Piano Fortes are now universally acknowledged by the most DISTINGUISHED ARTISTS to be the Best manufactured, and wherever they have been introduced and used, we are not required to say one word in their favor, their excellence stands pre-eminently to those of other makers, and from the great success achieved, and improvements made by us in the last thirty years, we can afford to sell a first-class Piano Forte at $100 to $150 less than a similar one can be bought elsewhere
Every Piano Forte Warranted for 5 Years, and to give Satisfaction.
Our Pianos are made to last; them aterials used for every part are thoroughly seasoned, and of the very best quality that can be procured. No part is slighted; what the public eye might see over, never escapes our vigilance. Every part, inside and out, is honestly, faithfully and thoroughly made, so that it will bear the most minute examination. They differ from the loud, coarse tone of most pianos, which is bad in the beginning, and grows worse every day, in as much as it is refined and delicate, pure in its vibrations, delightful in its singing capacity, and has all the power necessary to produce every desired effect.
They are, without doubt, the best, the most lasting, and consequently the cheapest. We are content with a fair profit. Our prices range from $300 to $600.00.
